

Sofia Papakonstantinou

Sofia Papakonstantinou holds a MA Degree in Publishing from LCC University, United Kingdom, a BA Degree in Interdisciplinary Human Studies from University of Bradford and a Diploma in Special Education from National and Kapodistrian University of Athens. Her current position today is in CreThiDev, working as a project manager dealing with Erasmus Strategic Partnership, Capacity Building and Erasmus Knowledge Alliance. Active in the field of EU projects since 2012; has experience in quality management, research, dissemination and stakeholders engagement activities; she has been working in projects in the field of training, including blended learning approaches for the development of new skills such as digital skills, research, development, employment and entrepreneurship. As freelancer she works with children who present learning difficulties like dyslexia, dyscalculia and dysgraphia. She has also worked in the past as an external consultant in projects related to training and social studies for National Technical University of Athens, Hellenic Organization of Small-Medium Enterprises and Vocational Training Centre of Athens Prefecture