Innovation vs. Compliance

Thesis:

Unless Governance and Compliance Management Systems do recognize the variability of business contexts and the individuality of people, they will breed non-innovative cultures.

(This is how we always did it, how we do it, and always will do it...)

Innovation vs. Compliance

Simon Sinek: „If you do not understand people, you do not understand business“

... when we are surrounded by people that believe what we believe, trust emerges... then we are more willing to experiment - which requires failure...

... every decision we take is a communication, it says s.th. about who we are and what we believe... this is why authenticity matters... the things we say and do are symbols of what we are and what we believe...

You can put out false symbols, and you will attract people to these symbols, but you won't form trust...

Innovation vs. Compliance

Dan Pink: „The Puzzle of Motivation“

Example candle stick problem: Motivation by Rewards:

Mechanical skill (left brain) = it works

Rudimentary cognitive skills (right brain) = does NOT work

Incentives (and punishment) do not work for creativity

Innovation vs. Compliance

Dan Pink: „The Puzzle of Motivation“

Missmatch of what science knows and what business does:

If businesses want the high performance on the definitional tasks of the 21st century, then give people:

Autonomy – Mastery – Purpose

The common set of value and believes should be governance and compliance enough

Innovation vs. Compliance

Ken Robinson: „How to escape education’s Death Valley“

Role of Leadership is NOT about

„Command and Control“, but about

„Climate Control“

Climate of Diversity – Curiosity – Creativity

– Culture of opportunity for creativity, curiosity on an individual basis...
