1 Event Description

In light of the ongoing war situation in Gaza, Palestine Technical College successfully conducted its ICT4EDU Open Info Day virtually via Zoom. This online event aimed to introduce participants to the latest advancements in educational technology, digital learning strategies, and innovative teaching methodologies despite the challenges posed by the crisis. Faculty members and students engaged in insightful discussions on how technology can enhance education, particularly in emergency settings.

The session commenced with Dr. Ezzaldeen Edwan, who presented an overview of the achievements of the ICT4EDU project at Palestine Technical College, highlighting the impact of the initiative on academic programs and digital transformation. Following this, Dr. Lubna Al-Ustaz delivered a session on project-based STEM education in times of crisis, emphasizing the importance of adaptable, technology-driven learning approaches during difficult circumstances.

Eng. Hiba Abu Ghali shared her training experience in Portugal within the project, shedding light on key topics covered and their potential applications in remote and digital education. The event then shifted focus to modern learning technologies, with Dr. Shadia Baroud exploring the latest technological tools that enhance virtual learning experiences.

As digital education gains momentum, Dr. Rawya Abu Khair discussed the role of virtual universities, highlighting their importance in ensuring continuous learning despite physical limitations. In a thought-provoking session, Dr. Ezzaldeen Edwan revisited the discussion to present how artificial intelligence can assist lecturers during crises, showcasing AI-driven solutions that improve the online teaching experience.

The Open Info Day concluded with an interactive discussion led by a group of students, who shared their experiences with technological education under e-learning conditions, reflecting on both the challenges and opportunities of remote learning in Gaza's current situation.

This virtual event aligned with the ICT4EDU project's mission to empower educators and students with cutting-edge digital knowledge and tools, ensuring that Palestine Technical College remains at the forefront of online learning and educational innovation, even in the most challenging times.
