

Dr. Anca NEDELCU

Anca NEDELCU, Ph.D., is a faculty member at the Faculty of Psychology and Educational Sciences, department of Educational Sciences. She is a tenured professor that holds the courses “Educational institutions management”, “Intercultural education” (bachelor’s level), “Intercultural negotiation and communication”, “The reflexive professor”, “Media education” (master’s level). She is vice-dean, responsible of quality management and international relations; she is part of the team that coordinates the master’s programme “Innovative learning strategies. Educational master.”. Her areas of professional and research interests fall on the concept of equity, diversity and reflexiveness in education, educational management and the influence of old and new media over education. She has finished specialty courses at the University of Amsterdam, Holland, she became an accredited trainer through the “Advanced Training of Trainers in Europe” programme from the European Board and the European Commission, educational consultant. She has coordinated numerous research-developmental projects, working alongside institutions such as: The World Bank, UNICEF, UNESCO, The Ministry of Education, Education Centre 2000+, National Roma Agency and so on.

Research interests:

- ✓ Reflexiveness and responsibility in education/The professor as a reflexive practitioner
- ✓ The pedagogy of diversity/Quality and equity in education
- ✓ The pedagogy of educational organizations/School and its members
- ✓ International and local dimensions in constructing educational/transfer strategies and practices, innovation, adaptation and cultural influences
- ✓ Well-being in school