

Dr. Reham Salhab

Reham Salhab is PhD candidate at An Najah National university (NNU). Currently she is a lecturer in Educational Technology department at Khadoorie University in (PTUK). She has published several articles on students' attitudes toward Moodle, Zoom, and mobile learning at PTUK. Moreover, she has published an article on the effect of Interactive smart board on pre-service teachers in a microteaching environment and designing a code of ethics for online learning. Her main area of interest is e-learning, mobile learning, gamification, educational technology, teaching and learning, professional development, and curriculum development.