

Christian Mancini
Associate Professor

Christian Mancini has a fellowship at the University of Brescia in the lab of Prof. Mirabella.

His primary interest lies in the understanding of how emotions are involved in the decision-making process, the neural underpinnings of the genesis of goal-directed action, the inhibition process of voluntary movements, and, in a broader sense, the cognitive dynamics of free will and consciousness. He is also involved in the Art Therapy lines of research involving Parkinson's patients.
