

Dr. Máté Zöldy

Head of research group - Budapest University of Technology and Economic

Máté ZÖLDY PhD is a senior research at Department of Automotive Technologies at TU Budapest. He is responsible for combustion engine research area and he leads research project in various autonomous vehicles topics. Máté has more than 10 years of experience from oil and gas industry and another 5 years in automotive industry. He started his career in Ford Engine Development Center in Cologne in Germany. After finishing PhD in Budapest, Hungary, he joined MOL Group where he held various positions: from product development engineer in Százhalombatta Refinery to Supply and Distribution manager in MOL Group SCM and Fuel Portfolio Manager in Commerce and Optimisation. He initiated and participated in lot of internal developments, as XXL Diesel – special product for niche markets, DS4U – internal education program development or introduction of unattended delivery in MOL Group. He holds a M.Sc. and .Ph.D. Degree in Vehicle Engineering from Budapest University of Technology and M. Sc. Degree in Economics in Corvinus University Budapest. He is married, they have five kids at home.